

Dr María del Rosario Pérez is a physician specialized in radiotherapy with a post-graduate diploma on Radiation Protection and Nuclear Safety, who worked in the field of radiation protection during more than 30 years. In 2007 she joined the WHO Radiation and Health Unit, where she contributed to the revision of the International Radiation Basic Safety Standards (BSS) and is currently leading a Global Initiative on Radiation Safety in Health Care Settings. She represents WHO at the Inter-Agency Committee on Radiation Safety (IACRS), the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (UNSCEAR), the IAEA Radiation Safety Standards Committee (RASSC), the International Commission on Radiological Protection (ICRP) and the EC Group of Scientific Experts referred to in Article 31 of the Euratom Treaty.